LESS CRIME HERE

There was less crime in this city during the year 1937, in proportion to population, than in most other principal cities in the country, according to comparative figures gathered by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The local police handled a total of 193 crimes of all types during the year, a rate of 5.89 offenses per 100,000 inhabitants. For the 351 cities in the country with populations of 25,000 or more, the average rate was 1,558 per 100,000.

The G-men included the six main types of crime in their survey: murder, assault, robbery, burglary, and auto theft. In this city, larcenies were most numerous, with 112 reported. The other totals were burglaries 29, auto thefts 21, robberies 4, and assaults 2.

A significant development in the crime pictures by the Federal Bureau of Investigation is that the average age of the offenders is rising. Between 1932 and 1935 most crimes were committed by 19-year-olds. During the past year the arrests were chiefly in the 22-year group. One-half of all persons charged with crimes against property—larceny, burglary or theft—were under the age of 25.

It is an encouraging sign when youths are reported to have learned that crime does not pay. Law enforcement efficiency has played an important part in impressing young people that they will lose when they gamble with the law, but the decrease of offenders under the age of 21 reflects credit on the parents, who realizing their responsibility, have instructed their children in the pitfalls that lead to crime and to their obligations as genuine citizens.

LABOR SHORTAGE

One of the remarkable things about Germany is that there is no unemployment. Lately there has developed an actual shortage of labor. As a result, government control over labor, already great, is being extended so that youths leaving the schools, and even girls, are being drafted for work, and independent artisans are forced to leave their shops and go into factories. The shortage exists in both skilled and unskilled labor. Superlatively this would suggest abounding prosperity. It is only during a great boom that we Americans find ourselves in such a plight. But Germany's achievement grows more dubious when you analyze it.

Where do the formerly idle masses go? First into the army, which has been greatly enlarged. Second into war industries, which are operating on a vast scale, and which, unless Hitler is accomplishing a miracle never heard of before, are impoverishing the country instead of enriching it. Third into a government labor service, which uses large numbers of men on highways, fortifications and other public projects. Fourth into the government and party bureaucracies that have grown with the scope of national operations.

The fact seems to be that Germany's "National Socialist" government (Nazis for short) is really coming to be what its name implies. Hitler is reshaping the German nation and economic system into what we would call State Socialism, with himself at the head wielding absolute power.

HUMOROUS TRUST-BUSTER

The appointment of Thurman W. Arnold, Yale law professor, to take Robert H. Jackson's place as assistant attorney-general of the United States, brings a new type of man into the federal service.

It is hard to think of this scholarly and witty author as a "trust-buster" in the literal sense of the term. He will not be expected to wield a bludgeon such as Mr. Jackson has swung with vigor. His manner of mind, his approach is gentle, his weapon is the rapier. He may be expected to run his victims through with a disarming smile and apologize for spilling their blood.

This quiet titler at political and economic conversation has become known chiefly through a book he published last fall, entitled "The Folklore of Capitalism," now said to be a best seller. Those who have read it say it is unlike any other book ever written in America. The author places himself out of the American system and, with a twinkle in his eye, gently but devastatingly tells the reader what he sees.

To him we are a strange people, with a curious and entertaining civilization, which he describes in terms of folklore as objectively as he would describe a savage tribe. We have a religion called Capitalism, whose priests are lawyers and judges, whose sacred scriptures are the Constitution and statutes, whose temples are banks. With quiet joy he takes our system apart and translates our accepted phraseology into simple folk terms. Whatever may be thought of his conclusions, it is a remarkable performance. It will also be a rather remarkable thing to have such a calm, witty and civilized radical in American public life.

That Body of Yours

SENSITIVENESS TO FOODS

It is hard to understand why foods that you have been eating for years now seem to disagree with you—headache, belching of gas, diarrhoea, vomiting. As you think it over your common sense tells you that the food or foods are the same, so the trouble must be with yourself.

It may be that you are not as strong physically as you were, that you eat when you are tired, that you take less exercise and yet eat the same kinds and amounts of food. Or it may be that your gland system is changing with the passing years and that the gland juices do not work together as well as they did.

It should be remembered also that there have been certain articles of food that have "always" given you some trouble—headache or gas—because for some years they just didn't seem to suit your digestive system.

I have spoken before of the research work on foods done by Drs. Walter C. Alvarez and H. Corwin Hinshaw of the Mayo Clinic and recorded in the Journal of the American Medical Association. These physicians state that the diet may cause upsets in the stomach and intestine in a number of ways: chemical irritation by certain parts of a food (the laxative juices in shubarb and prunes), delay in the emptying time of the stomach; such fat foods as butter, cream, egg yolks which stay in the stomach until all the rest of the food has been emptied from the stomach into the small intestine, enema (tendency to vomit), action from melons, cucumbers, tomatoes, temperature irritations (as from cold drinks), or finally, allergy or sensitiveness to certain parts of foods.

Then there is the stomach and intestinal disturbances which are caused, not because of the food itself, but because as mentioned above, of your own physical condition when you eat the food—tiredness, emotional upsets.

The first point then is that there are many people who are sensitive to food, by certain foods even when they are rested and free from any emotional disturbance. This is true allergy and such excellent foods as eggs and wheat are examples of this class. Skin and other tests are used to find these offending foods.

The second point is that certain foods are laxative or slow in leaving the stomach or cause belching or vomiting. In this type of disturbance the individual leaves out certain foods in his diet and thus finally finds the particular food or foods causing the symptoms.

Food Allergy

"What is one man's food is another man's poison" is an old saying but the truth of it is being proved almost daily by leading research physicians throughout the world. Some individuals are over-sensitive to certain foods and will have colds in their heads, "snuffy" noses, pains in the stomach or abdomen when they eat those foods, while other people suffer no ill effects after eating the same foods.

"Food Allergy" booklet No. 166 by Dr. Barton tells how to discover the offending foods and what to do about them. You may obtain this booklet by sending Ten Cents for each copy desired to cover cost of service and handling to The Bell Library, 247 West 43rd St., New York, N. Y., mentioning the Kingston Daily Freeman.

Chapter 47

'It Looks bad'
BALINGONG, behind the blackness, remained unseen. The smoke was very heavy here, and would have been a fog by day, but no fire showed. Some part of the town was burning, but slowly, almost without flame.

I whispered, "Put in to shore." Zumi the night was split wide open by a single rifle shot, and an unexpected crashing explosion almost jerked me out of my skin. Water splashed up, drenching my face, and instantly, without any command, the banked whirled like a top as my paddlers spun it upon its keelless bottom. I shouted, "Hold it! Linkang ahoy! Who's there?"

I heard Blair's voice sing out to unseen men, "Hold your fire there, damn you! Paul, is it you?" I answered him, and stepped over the gunle as the prau grounded. There was more water there than I thought, so that I floundered about idiotically until Blair got hold of me and pulled me upright.

"Well, you win the war," Blair said. His voice was deep and grating, inconceivably bitter. "Where's Clyde? Is he all right?" "Bad—awful bad. He's alive, and that's about all. He got shot in the stomach—there ain't no way to get the lead out. Come on in."

"Pull your bank up and lie down behind it," I said to my paddlers. "And keep ready to move out." Then I turned and followed Blair, stumbling in the blackness in spite of the fact that my feet knew the familiar way.

Blair had to guide me with a bony arm across my shoulders to the hidden entrance; for the big gate was now permanently closed, and we had to get over the walls by climbing a notched pole that served as a ladder.

A single Chinese lamp burned upon a table, and although the room was very shadowy, the shadows had a blurred, golden quality, unlike the blue blackness of the outer night. Apparently everything movable had been brought into this big room in the middle of the house; and all the rooms around the three sides had been closed off, their entrances tacked over with matting to shut in the lights.

Seven of the men from the Linkang were sleeping at various places on the floor. Two or three of them looked up and recognized me, but they gave me no greeting. Their eyes were dull, hopeless, silent; if there was anything in them it was hate. They dropped their heads again, like men who can afford to lose no moment's opportunity to sleep.

And upon a pile of matting in the far end of the room lay James Clyde. I went to his side, stepping softly, for he seemed to be asleep. He was propped up by mounds of rugs and mats and those gleaming gold-threaded wall hangings left from Mantusen's loot; and staring down at him, I was glad that the girl he loved could not see him as he was now—gaunt as a death's head, his face such a dead gray that it looked to be touched by mould.

His chest hardly moved, but his breath came heavily in his throat, and there was a small laboring movement of one nostril as he breathed. Evidently he was not truly asleep for his eyes opened now, and appeared to feel for me as they tried to focus. They managed it at last, and as my uncle and I looked at each other, I was unable to speak. There was a long moment of silence.

Rock-Gray Face

HIS words were thick and blurred, but his voice came surprisingly strong as he said, "Why the hell don't you shove?" Then his eyes lost their focus again, and after wandering a moment, were closed.

Blair came up and touched my arm. He motioned with his head to draw me aside, and led the way out. We stood together in the black night.

"I was going to move out tonight," he told me, "whatever come up. We'd ought to have moved out long ago. But as long as he was on his feet he wouldn't allow it."

His voice went on, weary but unhurried. "Clyde figured that the rice would give out pretty quick, and they'd begin fighting among themselves, and go home, and that when only the Malays were left we could tie into 'em."

"Do you think he's got a chance?"

"Well, it looks bad. It's three days since he was hit, and he's worse off than he was at the first. After they knocked him over I wanted to make a run for it and try to jam through the river and get back on the ship, but I didn't dare move him. We got the outside bleeding stopped—that was easy. But he bleeds out of his throat. That starts every time we begin to shift him any. I don't know what to do with him."

Can they get out of Balingong, Monday?

Historic Churches of Ulster

(In conjunction with the Ulster County Apple Blossom Festival, May 6, 7, 8.)

Church of the Ascension, West Park

The historic Church of the Ascension, situated on highway 9-W at West Park, is one of Ulster county's most interesting churches. Prior to 1842 it was a mission of St. James' Church in Hyde Park. Before the organization of the West Park parish, Episcopalians in the vicinity used to be ferried across the river in rowboats in order to attend the services in Hyde Park.

Tradition has it that one of these rowboats capsized in the middle of the river and most of its occupants were drowned. This unfortunate accident hastened the decision of the Rev. Roulson Sherwood, D. D., Rector of St. James' Church from 1835 to 1856, to take immediate steps to establish a church on the west bank of the Hudson. He called a meeting and organized the parish of the Ascension. In the first Vestry were Joseph B. Cottle, William M. Johnson, Archibald Russell, Albert L. Pell, E. Wainwright Butler, James Duane Pell, George Kidd, and Gilbert Johnson upon whose land the church now stands. The first wardens of the church were John Griffiths and Laird M. H. Butler. This organization took place April 4, 1842.

The present stone structure is the original building, erected at a cost of $1,500. The funds for its construction were given by Miss Anna Watts who was a summer visitor in West Park. Her home was in New York city and her parish church was the historic old Church of the Ascension which stands at Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street. She also gave the beautiful communion silver which is used on all high festivals of the church year.

The building of the church, began the latter part of April, and took the builders six months to complete it. It was formally opened for regular services on November 12, 1842, when the Right Reverend Benjamin Treadwell Onderdonk, Anglican Bishop of New York, consecrated it. The first rector of the parish was the Rev. Albert D. Traver who served the parish from 1842 to 1845. There have been 12 rectors. The longest incumbencies were held by the Rev. Henry Beers Sherman, rector from 1870 to 1881; the Rev. Richmond Leigh Dickenson, rector from 1887 to 1907, and the Rev. Richard Clinton Searing, rector from 1907 to 1926.

Prominent Members.
During the long history of Ascension Church, men of national prominence have served on its vestry and have guided its policies. Among these names are James D. and Robert Pell whose descendants still maintain an interest in its affairs. John Jacob Astor, who lost his life on the S. S. Titanic in 1912, was a member of the vestry for several years. General Daniel Butterfield, William H. van Benschoten, Eugene R. Durkee, John Jewell Smith and John U. Brookman were Vestrymen for long terms. All of these men were intensely concerned with the welfare of the parish; and with generosity they gave to benefit their church. No one can read through the carefully kept minutes without detecting this note of intense loyalty to the task and privilege of managing its affairs.

As a result of this high regard for duty, the Parish of the Ascension today presents an imposing appearance; and it is one of the show places in this part of the country. Rarely does one find even a country church set in the midst of more pleasant surroundings. There are 15 acres of fine waterfront property, most of which was willed to the parish in 1893 by General Butterfield who also gave generously of his substance to furnish the church. The rectory, a very charming old stone structure of three stories, was built in 1860. The sexton's house, the gift of the Brookman family, was erected in 1910. The fine new parish house, formerly the old stone carriage shed, made possible by the generosity of neighbors and friends in this part of the Hudson Valley, was opened in 1931. In all of these buildings native blue stone has been used for construction. One of the very interesting features in the church is the pulpit given by General Butterfield. At the base there is carved this inscription: "For so He giveth His Beloved Sleep."

People have come from far and near to see this remarkable legend for themselves; and it is said that several rectors of the parish have hesitated to use the pulpit because of it!

Recognized by State.

In the Fall of 1935, through the efforts of Mrs. Alton Brooks Parker of Esopus, the State Board of Education erected one of its familiar blue markers on the property, thereby honoring upon it the dignity of historic interest.

The Parish of the Ascension is the home of the now quite famous West Park Dahlia and Flower Show which is held every year on the Thursday following Labor Day.

Naturally it is deeply interested in the Apple Blossom Festival; and it will mark the occasion with an appropriate celebration on the Church Day of the Festival.

The present wardens of the church are Messrs. Julian Burroughs, son of the famous John Burroughs, and William Annin who are Messrs. Theodor Oxborn, Leslie Mott, Charles Oberg, Arthur Loren LeFevre, James Ackert and Reuben Gullian. The Rev. Arthur McKay Ackerson succeeded to the rectorship in November, 1935.

Wings, wings, wings. repeated Christopher Columbus Crow, getting up now from the ground and brushing himself off.

"Wings, wings, wings," he cried once again, and now he took to the yard wings and flew up over the yard where the monkeys were playing.

Over and over the yard he circled. Over and over the monkeys he flew, and then he flew off toward Puddle Muddle and Willy Nilly's house, and as he flew he cried:

"Caw, caw, caw, wings, wings, wings. I'm using them. I am!" The little man gave a little shakedown, some bananas, and then he followed along after his crow.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Sometimes it prof. its one to get away from Broadway and look on some other section of the town—Fifth Avenue, for instance, with its cheerfulness and its air of scrubbed well-being.

Here is a wide, witty street with clean sidewalks and an ingratiating manner of bestowing surprises on those who amble down its rosy sidewalks. It has its hair combed, and if there is occasionally a spot of mud on its boots, that is because it is a part of New York and therefore a wee bit unpredictable.

But today the sun is shining and you come to a full stop before that madador is the Thos. Cook window. Old Spain is here, with the cruelty of grandees and the harsh realism of bull-fighting. There are brocade costumes costing $1,000, swords, picks, and the painted legends.

"Bull-fighting is a thrilling drama in which each actor must be better perfect in his appointed role, for death is the swift penalty for the one who misses his cue." You believe this when you see horses being gored and lost madadors being ground into the dust.

A CROSS the street in the calm dignity of stone is the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, and a few steps away the teaming offices of the French Lines, with its great bronze doors and its jaunty tri-colors. This is the beginning of "international way" for near at hand is the British Empire building, a companion edifice to the French Line, with its lions and Union Jack and over all the great Seal of Empire, bearing the legend: "Dieu Et Mon Droit."

Here too are the Italians, green, white, and red banners streaming, and a whole library of booklets describing the benefits of traveling on any of the big Italian boats.

JUST across the way is one of New York's great fashion centers, "Saks Fifth Avenue," and a few steps down, the marvelous book windows of Scribners. What a riot of names and color! Van Loon, Lewis, O'Neill: fiction, poetry, drama. In their new jackets these biographies and novels are like a cluster of Frenchmen off to a Madrid Crab Ball.

But if Fifth Avenue has its joys, there are also private sorrows, old women and little girls hawking gardenias, cripples with razor blades to sell, an outraged motorist whose fender has been torn off by a careening taxicab.

A peaceful contrast is the sight of pigeons alighting unafraid on the shoulders of the big cop who directs traffic there, and the quiet pilgrims who seek solace in the great cathedral which sits on the Avenue not unlike the House of Parliament on the Thames.

Sundown Stories

Christopher's Fall

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS
Crow forgot about his wings in his desire to copy the monkeys. He tried to leap from one branch to the next just as the monkeys did. But Christopher had no tail. He had not even had any experience in the tricks the monkeys could do.

Christopher Columbus Crow, for all his splendid, broad wings, had fallen to the ground. It was just at that moment that Willy Nilly came along.

"Christopher Columbus Crow," cried the little man, "are you anywhere around?" The crow was in the soft, melting snow. His black feathers and white underparts were covered with patches of watery snow.

"He has wings, wings, wings," cried all the monkeys in glee. "He has wings, wings, wings." Poor Christopher picked himself up from the wet snow.

"They played a prank on me," he said, and winked at Willy Nilly. The little man admitted his crow for being a good sport.

"Wings, wings, wings," cried the monkeys. "Wings, wings, wings," repeated Christopher Columbus Crow, getting up now from the ground and brushing himself off.

"Wings, wings, wings," he cried once again, and now he took to the yard wings and flew up over the yard where the monkeys were playing.

Over and over the yard he circled. Over and over the monkeys he flew, and then he flew off toward Puddle Muddle and Willy Nilly's house, and as he flew he cried:

"Caw, caw, caw, wings, wings, wings. I'm using them. I am!" The little man gave a little shakedown, some bananas, and then he followed along after his crow.

LIFE'S LITTLE LESSONS

OFFICE CAT

That was a good joke a hitchhiker played on himself near Waterloo, Iowa, recently. He thumbed a ride and the man who picked him up was the sheriff, who was looking for him. He got the ride all right—to the county jail.

Speed Blend (as he slowed down a bit)—Wheel! Don't you feel glad you're alive.

Timid Passenger—Glad isn't the word. I'm amazed.

How about filling a punch bowl with some of the gasoline that stops knocking and inviting all the gloom prophets to the party?

Dusty Pedestrian—The motorist that hits me will certainly be sorry.

Companion—Why?

Dusty Pedestrian—Because I'm carrying a stick of dynamite in my pocket.

This interesting item is from the Altoona, Pa., Mirror: "In due course of time, motorists will be guided throughout Pennsylvania by a uniform system of signs that will be a material aid in reducing accidents and confusing motorists."

We haven't tried Pennsylvania lately, but boy, it's fun finding routes through some states.

Slow your car down when taking corners and you will save hundreds of miles in your automobile tires.

A doctor received a call late one cold and stormy night and on a lonely road quite a ways in the country his car broke down. The only life he could see was a light in a home in the distance. He walked to the house and rapped on the door. A very handsome young woman appeared. He explained his plight and asked if he could stay all night. She explained that she was a widow and had only one bedroom, but that she would be glad to let him have it, and that she would sleep on the lounge.

He went to the room, took off his clothes and went to bed. He had been there only a short time when the door opened slightly and a soft voice inquired: "Are you asleep?" "No," replied the doctor. "All right," she responded, "another man's car has broken down and he wants to stay here tonight also, so I'll send him in."

Say one thing for the fool automobile driver. He doesn't claim to be doing it in the interest of science.

Stern Parent (to applicant for daughter's hand)—Young man, can you support a family.

Young Man (meekly)—I only wanted Sarah.

Read it or not:

Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont are the only states in the Union almost entirely free from poisonous serpents.

Mrs. Tenderfoot—Will the operation be dangerous, doctor?

Dr. Silsbee—Now, don't you worry about that. You can't buy a dangerous operation for $50.

Bob—See any change in me?

Johnny—No, why?

Bob—I just swallowed 15 cents.

Some men drink like a fish and make it a real holiday, but when they stagger home and the missus gets a line on them they squirm like a worm which has been put on a hook.

HIGHLAND NEWS

Highland Workers Attend Meeting

Highland, March 12.—An announcement that actual work would start on the general contract for the building of a new Junior-Senior high school next week and a talk on operation of the unemployment insurance law by Manager Carey of the Poughkeepsie office of the State Employment Service occupied the attention of more than 50 men at the meeting of Highland Workers held in Town Hall last evening. Fred Palmer presided and E. D. Randall acted as secretary.

Mr. Randall also said Noll and Stearns of Fleischmanns, who received the contract for the plumbing work, had agreed to obtain all necessary laborers through the local group.

In his talk Mr. Carey outlined salient features of the operation of the unemployment insurance law and showed the men certain of the forms which must be filled out. He said that he regretted that in some instances workers failed to receive their checks promptly and attributed the cause of such delay to human mistakes made by the applicants, their employers and the state staff and the almost inhuman task of handling the mountain of applications which had piled up in Albany as the result of the present business recession. He asked the assemblage whether they preferred the Poughkeepsie or the Kingston office as the more convenient and the overwhelming vote taken was for Poughkeepsie to which the Town of Lloyd had been shifted around the first of the year. Mr. Carey then answered the many questions put to

HOME BUREAU

Flatbush Unit.

The art of applying makeup to the face to bring out the best features and give the natural look that is so desired by women was explained in an interesting talk Thursday to the members of the Flatbush unit of the Usher County Home Bureau by Mrs. Helen Powell Smith, grooming specialist from the State College. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Osterhout and was an all-day meeting in charge of Mrs. Osterhout and Mrs. Palon. The morning session was devoted to program planning and adjustments in the unit's calendar. At noon a box luncheon was enjoyed, supplemented by delicious apple pie and coffee served by the hostess. At the afternoon session the leaders gave the fourth lesson in the grooming series with a demonstration of the yeast and witch hazel pack and the proper method of applying astringent, cream, rouge, powder and lip stick. Massages and exercises were shown that would help eliminate wrinkles, stimulate the skin and reduce excess flesh about the chin. Mrs. Winfield Swart and Mrs. Hans Carlson acted as models.

At the business session Mrs. Harold Osterhout was re-elected chairman; Mrs. Harry Darling, vice chairman; Mrs. Alvin Paley, secretary; and Mrs. Anna Miller, treasurer. Lists for the loan closet were completed and turned in to Mrs. Fred Kukuk, and typed sheets giving available sick room articles and at whose home they may be obtained will soon be ready for the members and the community.

Those present at the meeting were Mrs. Christian Ducker, Mrs. Fred Kukuk, Mrs. Osterhout, Miss Mary Osterhout, Mrs. Eustace Pathmont, Mrs. Alvin Paley, Mrs. Winfield Swart, Mrs. Harry Darling and two visitors, Mrs. Hans Carlson and Mrs. Frank Osterhout.

The Melbourne, Australia pedestrian is a favored being. Experiments are being conducted by which he will be able, at peak periods, to cross from the four corners of an intersection simultaneously. "Cross Now" will flash from four standards and stop all traffic.

Spring Styles And Suggestions Given

A large audience of interested women from all over the county met at the Fair Street Reformed Church Friday afternoon for a demonstration and talk on "Personality in Dress," under the auspices of the Ulster County Home Bureau.

County units this winter have been studying good grooming incorporating the care of the face, hair arrangement, posture, and personality. Friday afternoon Mrs. Helen Powell Smith, clothing specialist from the College of Home Economics, illustrated the ideas of the various projects.

By means of changing the style of clothes, the colors and the lines, she showed how two models acquired entirely different personalities, one of which was outstanding. She also had a model who showed right and wrong posture and the effect on the personality.

The next demonstration was on color to show how the blonde, the brunette, and the grey reacted in the same colors in varying tones, and also showed that the new spring colors have a grayed or softened quality, thus making more colors accessible to more people.

Perhaps the most interesting demonstration was that which showed the use of accessories with a basic costume in the wardrobe for which Mrs. Smith used collars, edgings, scarfs, jackets, and innumerable simple suggestions for changing an outfit.

As a final showing of personality in dress, several of the models appeared wearing the newest spring fashions which had been furnished by the Paris Cloth and Suit Company, The Budget Shop, The Carl Millinery Shop, Mrs. Virginia S. DeGraff, The Barbizon Shop and Lymes Shoe Store.

Mrs. Smith pointed out the salient features of each outfit and explained the touches that were new for the spring season.

Members of the Home Bureau who modeled the clothes and aided in the demonstration were: Mrs. J. W. Harris, Mrs. Reed Wilkins, Mrs. Harold Osterhout, Mrs. Joseph Burger, Mrs. Susie LeFever, Miss Mary Doyu, Mrs. G. H. Bevier, Mrs. M. D. Grant and Mrs. Ellen Gulnick.

Married 50 Years and Recall Blizzard of 1888

Freeman Photo

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Weed, of 83 Franklin street, observed their golden wedding anniversary on March 7. Mr. Weed was born in West Hurley July 18, 1866, and Mrs. Weed, who before marriage was Rose E. Sicker, was born in Sawkill February 25, 1867.

Mr. Weed started work as a stone cutter in the old West Hurley quarries when a youth. When the slump came in the blue stone industry, he removed to Kingston in 1905 and secured employment with the L. S. Winne Co., where he worked for 15 years. For the past 17 years, Mr. Weed has been employed as janitor at the Kingston High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Weed recall vividly the blizzard of 1888, which started the night of March 11 and continued for several days. On that March day, 50 years ago, Mr. Weed and his bride drove to "Olive Bound," the present site of the Kenosia Club, to visit the bride's parents. Snow started to fall at night and their departure was deferred until the next day, but upon arising the blizzard was raging and in a short time the snow depths ranged from 10 to 20 feet. Several days later they returned by train to their home in West Hurley.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

New York, March 12 (AP).—

Tension over European war prospects lessened in the stock market today and leaders generally retrieved portions of their recent losses.

Steels, rails, motors and specialties succeeded in getting up fractions to a point or more after a slight dip at the opening. Dealings were comparatively quiet and there was an assortment of losers at the close of the two-hour proceedings.

Overnight consideration of the latest Austro-German developments led some observers in the street to the conclusion that while the political map of central Europe might undergo a substantial alteration, chances of a general conflict at the present time were comparatively small.

The better action of the list was also attributed partly to the fact the downturn of the past night or nine days called for at least a moderate recovery.

Transfers were around 350,000 shares.

Steels were helped by forecasts of a 4-point increase in mill operations at Pittsburgh next week. More encouraging reports from the automobile makers stiffened the resistance of motors.

Bonds were ragged, with rails still lacking friends. Grain and cotton futures put on their usual war-scare performance, the former being inclined to advance and the latter retreat.

Foreign Markets Drop Over Crisis In Austria Friday

With trading up to 770,000 shares stock averages showed a loss all day Friday. At the close of the market industrials had lost 2.27 points, to 122.44 in the Dow-Jones averages; rails declined 0.79, to 25.65; utilities were down 0.29, to 18.54. Corporate bonds were lower, governments eased. Wheat was strong, domestic sugar firm; cotton, rubber and hides eased.

London, Paris, Amsterdam and Prague (Czechoslovakia) markets dropped as tension increased over the Austro-German crisis, but the markets had closed before it was known that Nazis had seized control of the Austrian government, that German troops were reported crossing the Bavarian frontier in a march on Vienna. That Chancellor Schuschnigg had resigned and that his place had been taken by Hitler's man, Dr. von Seyss-Inquart with a Nazi cabinet. Near panic conditions were reported from the Prague market, where, under the lead of Skoda shares, stocks dropped precipitously.

Department store sales in the New York Federal Reserve District dropped 13.5 per cent for the week ended March 5 as compared with the like period a year ago. Inclusion of weather and atonement of the Easter season are given as contributing causes.

Anheuser-Busch reported net income of $4,164,244, or $22.12 a share for 1937, as compared with $2,041,655, or $16.90 a share in 1936. Lehigh Valley Coal showed a loss of $938,854, compared with net income of $24,419, or 12 cents a share a year ago. Mother Lode Coalitions Mines made $1,530,555 in 1937, or $405.555 in 1936.

Hershey Chocolate reports net income of $2,274,155 for the quarter ended December 31, compared with income of $868,374, or 87 cents a share a year ago. There was an inventory write-down of $3,374,498. However, the company had net income for the year 1937 of $222,109, equal to $3.67 a share on convertible stock.

Glycine and Fuel declared a dividend of 40 cents on common vs. previous quarterly of 50 cents. Universal-Cyclops Steel voted 12 1/2 cents vs. previous of 25 cents quarterly.

Pressed Metals of American deferred dividend action. Sharp drop in steel business at the end of the year made resumption of common dividends by Republic Steel impossible in 1937, according to Chairman Girdler and President Wysox.

U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals reaffirmed two previous rulings that six major motion picture companies violated the federal anti-trust laws by their clause prohibiting motion picture exhibitors from having double-feature programs. Companies affected are Vitaphone, Inc., RKO Distributing Corp., Paramount Pictures Distributing Corp., Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Distributing Corp., Fox Films Corp. and United Artists Corp.
